

was towed away, and police gave the other two people rides home, according to a CMPD news release. Police offered Newman a ride home, according to the news release, but she stayed at the scene after the disabled car was towed away. Digital Access for only $0.99 # Citing witness statements and evidence, police said Newman may have been drinking before she was killed. # Burt said his sister's phone and ID were towed away in the disabled car, and the family wants to know why his sister was left alone, late at night, potentially intoxicated and with little means to get help. # " We're gon na make sure that proper protocol, good judgment and moral compass was followed " when the officers made the decision to drive away, he said. # According to a CMPD news release, police are reviewing all video footage of the incident to " ensure that the officers' actions were consistent with CMPD policy. " Burt said he and his family are waiting to hear the outcome of that review. # Newman grew up in Charlotte and graduated from Harding University High School, where she played soccer and tennis, he said. # She was working on a college degree in sports medicine when she was killed, Burt said, and she was about to transfer from Central Piedmont Community College to UNC Charlotte. # " She definitely was a people person, " he said. " She definitely brought a lot of joy to the conversation. " # Newman loved to learn, Burt said, and she was ready to keep making progress in her life. While attending college, she was also working at the uptown seafood restaurant Eddie V's and babysitting