

A Colorado man was arrested for defrauding a woman out of more than $100,000 by claiming to be a former football player for the Denver Broncos, police said. # James Otis Turner, 49, of Highlands Ranch, was busted Friday and taken into custody at the Douglas County Jail after an arrest warrant was obtained by detectives in Castle Rock for felony charges of theft, forgery, identity theft and criminal impersonation, police announced Wednesday. # Investigators said a woman in Castle Rock told police in October that Turner convinced her he was a former player for the Broncos by the name of Dante Sir Foster. But Turner has had no affiliation with the team or the NFL, police said. # A news release announcing the alleged scheme did not indicate how much money Turner bilked from the woman or how the alleged scheme worked, but a police spokesman said the amount exceeded $100,000. # Messages seeking additional comment from police in Castle Rock were not immediately returned early Thursday. # Turner was arrested in October by the Arapahoe County Sheriff's Office in connection with an unrelated sexual assault. Since that time, several women have told investigators that he identified himself to them as a Denver Bronco. # Turner's alleged scheme seemingly involves at least two bogus blogs -- including one from 2016 -- that identified him as Dante Foster, a defensive back formerly known as James Morgan who was raised in San Antonio. # " Minnesota Vikings and New York Giants, Arizona Cardinals, and the Pittsburgh Steelers were first to show interest and eventually landed with the Minnesota Vikings for the 2011-2012 season, "
